Look out for Hedgehogs in Froyle

12th September 2021 Editor Gardens, Sightings

Are you fortunate to have a hedgehog in your garden? Having been several years since seeing any in our garden, we were delighted recently to see the little black 'calling cards' that are evidence a hedgehog has spent some time visiting ours. I'm sure many of you will be aware of the severe decline in hedgehog numbers across the UK, including in the countryside. With this in mind there are several things we can do to help them.

They start to hibernate in October. However, if they are underweight they won't survive over the Winter. Therefore, if you see a small hedgehog at the moment, this will be a young hedgehog, also called a hoglet, please contact Hart Wildlife Rescue - www.hartwildlife.org.uk - who should be able to take the hoglet and build it up, so it can be safely released next Spring.
